New Legal Network Promotes Expanded Collaborative Dispute Resolution

DALLAS, TX
November 14, 2017

Attorneys Without Litigation, a new network of North Texas attorneys and allied professionals, has been launched to promote the use of collaborative processes to resolve business, family, probate and other legal disputes. It is believed to be the only collaborative law network in Texas to address the needs of businesses and individuals in civil legal disputes as well as family law matters. The nine founding members – eight lawyers and one financial professional, will work together and with other collaboratively trained professionals to help businesses and families craft solutions to disputes without resorting to litigation or other adversary processes.

“Collaborative law processes are already well established as effective and beneficial in divorce matters,” Laura Schlenker, President of Attorneys Without Litigation. “We believe that through this new network we can dramatically expand the use of these processes to many other types of disputes, including business conflicts, probate matters and other civil matters such as medical error claims. When parties in dispute are represented by dedicated settlement lawyers and agree to share pertinent information in order to develop a mutually beneficial solution, they can achieve resolution efficiently and without needless harm to their relationships.”

“The collaborative approach is pro-business, pro-family and offers the best opportunity for creative, productive and dignified resolution of a wide range of legal disputes,” said Schlenker. “Attorneys Without Litigation can help families and businesses in North Texas do that.”

Attorneys Without Litigation is a collaborative law practice group – an association of collaboratively trained lawyers, financial professionals and communications experts. Working as a team, these professionals help clients resolve legal disputes while at the same time addressing other collateral issues that are important to the parties but may not be achievable in court, such as business dissolution details, elder-care options and restructuring of contracts.
